

HISTORY OF THE Queensland Ambulance

Home Hill

Q ATB services commenced in Home Hill in December 1951 when a Sub-Centre administered by the Ayr Centre was opened in temporary premises in Seventh Street, with Mr Arthur Elliot (formerly of the Townsville Centre) as Officer-in-Charge.

At the request of the Ayr Committee, the Chairperson of the Ayr Shire Council, Mr E.W. Ford convened a public meeting in the Home Hill School of Arts building on 16 December 1952 to discuss the matter of Home Hill becoming a self-governing Centre. In addition to the Chairperson and Superintendent of the Ayr Committee, 24 members of the general public (including Mr A. Coburn MLA) attended the meeting.

It was unanimously decided that the Minister of Health and Home Affairs should be requested to arrange for the proclamation of an Order in Council to raise the status of the service from a Sub-Centre to a Centre. Members present expressed the desire that Mr Elliot be appointed Superintendent of the new Centre.

In accordance with the request of the State Secretary a Provisional Committee comprising the following members was appointed: H.P. Luxton, A.S. Dunn, W. Breen, W.C. Rawnsley, G.D. Barton, H.W. Davies and H.L. Thompson. The Provisional Committee at its first meeting on 21 April 1953 elected the following office bearers: A.S. Dunn (Chairperson), W.C. Rawnsley (Deputy Chairperson), G.D. Barton (Honorary Treasurer) and A.J. Elliott (Secretary).
